Incoming agencies

Our incoming agencies support the business of the Group tour operators in the most important destinations and contribute significantly to quality assurance by making direct customer contact. The agencies incorporate sustainable topics in their numerous company procedures. Often cooperations are started up with local non-government organisations to push forward together sustainable tourism development in the interests of both the holidaymakers and the local population.

Airlines

The airlines of the TUI Group employ aircraft of the latest design so as to continuously achieve a reduction in fuel consumption, in emissions and in aircraft noise. Technical innovations, fleet renewal and the constant optimisation of technical and operational processes, such as the reduction of static engine tests, make a significant contribution to environmental protection. Responsible for the Group-wide implementation of and adherence to the in-house developed environmental standards is the centralised TUI Airline Management.

Cruises

Hapag-Lloyd Cruises sails the seas with ships boasting the latest design as well as up-to-date environmental technology and ecologically compatible underwater paint. On trips to ecologically sensitive regions the marine tourism provider works closely together with the WWF and IAATO (International Association of Antarctic Tour Operators) so as to ensure the greatest possible protection of the sensitive ecological systems as well as sustainable use. In the financial year 2008, the way for the entry into the German volume market for premium cruises was paved by the formation of TUI Cruises.
